

Dear Children's Circle Families,

I hope that you will indulge me this month as I pay tribute to my dad. As most of you know, he passed away recently. At age 87, he was still my counsel, my adviser and my encourager.

Reflecting upon his life has given me much to ponder about parenting. During my dad's final days he said, "You have always made me happy." Now you and I both know that can't possibly be true. I was a regular child and I know for a fact that I was not the most pleasant teenager in the world. But, I think in a way it was true because of my dad's attitude. My dad had a gift for knowing exactly what to expect from a defiant 2 year old, an emotional preteen or an unreasonable teenager. So, his expectations were realistic. However, he always expected me to be the best "me" I could be.

I hope that as teachers and parents we can remember that we are helping children become the very best versions of themselves. In order to do this we have to get to know our children and help them discover their own identity. This takes time, trial and error, patience and above all love.

I will miss my dad terribly because he loved me enough to give me boundaries, teach me morals, and let me be the person that God intended me to be. By the way, I'm still working on that.

So, here's to you Dad! Thanks for everything!

Many blessings to all,
Susan Q. Wade, Director
